Teaching

At TUM, I teach in the Bachelors and Masters Programs in Information Engineering (at the multi-university Bildungscampus in Heilbronn). At LMU Munich, I was the coordinator of the Masters degree in Computational Linguistics. At LMU, I typically taught a standard full teaching load (9 SWS), but after becoming a professor I received a reduction (during the rest of my ERC Starting Grant, and later through German Excellence Funding). I also organized the institute reading group (together with Schütze and Plank), on deep learning approaches for natural language processing and machine translation.

Masters/Bachelors Advising

I have directly advised 39 Bachelors level and 29 Masters level students myself, mostly at LMU Munich and the University of Stuttgart, but also at University of Ljubljana and Université de Fribourg. I have acted as Prüfer and/or second supervisor (mostly together with a PhD or PostDoc supervised by me) for many more. Marion Weller's Bachelors Thesis (Studienarbeit) in Computational Linguistics, Separate Morphologiebehandlung als Methode zur Verbesserung statistischer maschineller Übersetzung (Separate Morphological Processing as a Method for Improving Statistical Machine Translation), completed 05/2009, was the winner of Informatik-Verbund-Stuttgart Award (given yearly for the two best Bachelors Theses in computer science-related fields in Stuttgart). A good number of the student works I have supervised have resulted in joint conference publications which passed peer review, see my publications list.
